Exploring the site-dependent molecular interactions between activated EGF receptors in plasma membrane with high-resolution optical tracking

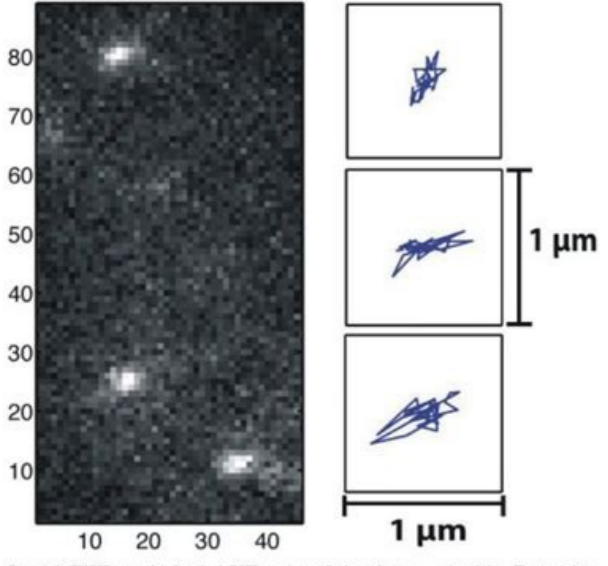

Figure 2. An SMLM image of single molecule EGFs in a living cell taken with an exposure time of 20 ns. Three typical trajectories of EGFs observed in confined regions were extracted from sequential exposures using the software mentioned in the text.

Before the plasma diffusion, they began the dithering effect in. This shall result in a smaller variance of E_{EGF} and thereby yields smaller E_{EGF} for lower diffusion positions.

3. Results
3.1. Single-molecule optical spectroscopy of CD39 reveal the association with cholesterol rich lipid domains
Lipid raft domains are rich in cholesterol and sphingomyelin and are enriched in CD39. Previous studies had reported that CD39 was colocalized with GPIIb/IIIa in the plasma membrane of $\alpha_2\beta_1$. Here we used CD39 as a marker for the lipid raft domains.

Submit a Manuscript More Journal Metrics Treatment with fluvoxamine (100 mg twice daily for 10 days) among high-risk outpatients with early diagnosed COVID-19 reduced the need for hospitalisation defined as retention in a COVID-19 emergency setting or transfer to a tertiary hospital.Although health outcomes have improved in low-income and middle-income countries (LMICs) in the past several decades, a new reality is at hand. Changing health needs, growing public expectations, and ambitious new health goals are raising the bar for health systems to produce better health outcomes and greater social value. But staying on current trajectory will not suffice to meet these demands. What is needed are high-quality health systems that optimise health care in each given context by consistently delivering care that improves or maintains health, by being valued and trusted by all people, and by responding to changing population needs.Talking about COVID-19 has become a ritual for everyone. The COVID-19 pandemic has put respiratory illness—infection, pneumonia, and death—in the daily headlines. Many of us have been anticipating and dreading the next global respiratory pandemic. 2019 marked a century since the end of the 1918 H1N1 influenza A pandemic, and many marvelled at the fact that we had made it 100 years without a similar occurrence. Although there have been other global pandemics since, the 1918 influenza pandemic stood out in that it lasted over a year, infected about a third of the world's population, and killed more than 50 million people.The African region is estimated to have had a similar number of COVID-19 infections to that of the rest of the world, but with fewer deaths. Our model suggests that the current approach to SARS-CoV-2 testing is missing most infections. These results are consistent with findings from representative seroprevalence studies. There is, therefore, a need for surveillance of hospitalisations, comorbidities, and the emergence of new variants of concern, and scale-up of representative seroprevalence studies, as core response strategies. The Lancet Global HealthISSN 2214-109X The world-leading global health journal The Lancet Global Health focuses on disadvantaged populations, be they whole economic regions or marginalised groups within otherwise prosperous nations, with a preference for the following topics: reproductive, maternal, neonatal, child, and adolescent health; infectious diseases, including neglected tropical diseases; non-communicable diseases; mental health; the global health workforce; health systems; surgery; and health policy. In addition, we continue The Lancet's tradition of advocacy and health policy and aims to catalyse alliances between health-care professionals, the public, and policy makers to champion change based on the best evidence to deliver better health worldwide. We publish a range of content types including Articles, Review, Comment, and Correspondence. We also publish Series and Commissions that aim to shape and drive positive change in global health. Learn more about the types of papers we publish. The Lancet journals are both a destination for publication and a platform to advance the global impact of research. The Lancet Group cares that your work is highly visible to a global network of researchers, clinicians, industry professionals, policy makers, media outlets, patients, and the wider public, and we work with you and your affiliated institutions to maximise the impact of your research on the world. Lancet journals have extensive global reach with more than 42.5 million annual visits on TheLancet.com and 268.7 million downloaded articles across TheLancet.com and ScienceDirect. Lancet Alerts, including our electronic Table of Contents, have over 3.5 million subscriptions. Lancet journals have nearly 1.8 million followers on Twitter, Facebook, LinkedIn, WeChat, Weibo, and YouTube. With over 363 000 annual mentions in news articles, research published in Lancet journals receives regular coverage in influential media such as the Associated Press, BBC, CNN, Financial Times, The Guardian, The New York Times, NPR, and The Washington Post. Lancet podcasts receive nearly 76 000 listens each month. The Lancet Global Health is an internationally trusted source of global health knowledge. With an Impact Factor of 38-927 we are the world-leading global health journal (2021 Journal Citation Reports®, Clarivate 2022). We recognise that the Journal Impact Factor is just one measure of a journal's performance and encourage you to explore additional journal impact metrics, which provide a means to assess our journals. From acceptance of your paper through to publication and beyond, our in-house teams of professional Editors, Assistant Editors, Illustrators, Production Editors, and Marketing and Communications experts can provide personal attention and guidance to strengthen the accuracy, accessibility, timeliness, and impact of your research. Lancet journals are signatories of the Recommendations for the Conduct, Reporting, Editing, and Publication of Scholarly Work in Medical Journals issued by the International Committee of Medical Journal Editors (ICMJE Recommendations) and to the Committee on Publication Ethics (COPE) code of conduct for editors. We follow COPE's guidelines. The Lancet Global Health is a gold open access journal. All content, including Reviews and Comments, is published under a gold open access licence, but the article processing charge (APC) only applies to full-length articles that are peer reviewed. All content is immediately and freely available to anyone and published under a Creative Commons license, which enables authors to retain copyright of their work. To support the costs of publishing including reviewing (first by internal review, and then external peer review), technical copy editing, typesetting and graphics, online hosting, archiving, and promotion, authors who publish OA in our journals pay the APC, upon acceptance. The APC is paid by you, your institutions, or funding bodies. We believe ability to pay should never be a barrier to publication, and there are several options, including waivers and discounts available to authors to support publishing fees. Explore your options for publishing open access, including information regarding APCs, waivers and discounts, and copyright options. The Editor-in-Chief is the final arbitrator of all decisions on each of the Lancet journals—for example, the decision to take a paper to peer review, the decision to publish or reject in light of the peer reviewers' remarks, journal scope and commissioning, consideration of appeals, general enquiries, and editorial priorities at any given time. The Lancet Group does not permit the Editor-in-Chief, or any in-house editors, to submit full-length articles to any of our journals. If you have additional queries, we will be pleased to help. Please email us directly or at . Learn more about the teams and people supporting The Lancet Global Health. Our International Advisory Board consists of key opinion leaders and researchers from around the world who lend their expertise to the journal. The Board offer the journal subject, academic, and geographical advice on an ad hoc basis when requested by the editorial team. Board members have no formal involvement in content selection or in any part of the peer review process, nor do they have editorial oversight of any section of the journal. Board members are occasionally invited to peer review individual submissions at the request of the editorial team. Submissions authored by members of the Board are handled solely by The Lancet Global Health's editors according to our standard peer review processes; these submissions are never discussed by the Board or members thereof. We are very grateful for their support and advice on editorial matters. If you need to question an editorial decision, your first step should be to contact the editorial team. If you are not satisfied with our response, your next point of contact is our Ombudsperson whose task is to record and, when required, investigate allegations of editorial maladministration. Our files will be freely open to their inspection, and confidentiality will be respected in all cases. Our Ombudsperson's remit does not extend to areas normally covered in our correspondence columns—namely, issues of editorial content and editorial policy.
